

Ladyhawke

BAND STORY

"Ladyhawke is New Zealand girl Pip Brown. She has had a busy year recording and touring both here and across the globe. She's played headline shows in Paris, Barcelona, Ibiza, Moscow, Australia and her native New Zealand. She performed three times in one day at Glastonbury and she paused briefly at the beginning of July to play her first headline show in London to a sold out crowd. Pip was raised in the 80's with a musical family and grew up listening to the likes of Stevie Nicks, Deep Purple and Joan Jett. Starting as the drummer in a school band, Pip plays four different instruments on her debut album. She moved to Sydney a few years back and then moved to London in 2007 where she wrote and recorded the album. Ladyhawke's self titled debut album has been written, arranged and recorded with several guest producers with her chief collaborator being none other than world-renowned producer Pascal Gabriel. The final result is an album that marries serious song crafting with elements of vintage pop, electro and rock. Or as Pip puts it, "I wanted to make music that could put a smile on people's faces and give them a feeling of nostalgia even though they may be hearing my songs for the first time"."
